2. LITERATURE REVIEW

2.1 Tourism Destination Development

In development, both the development of destinations, tourism areas and tourist objects and attractions generally follow the flow of tourism life [8]. In the tourism development process, careful and strategic planning is very necessary. According to [9], if there is no planning at a tourist destination it can have a negative impact on the area.

Development and improvement in the tourism industry is encouraged to become one of the sectors that provides large capital in developing the economy, developing tourist destinations, and improving people’s welfare [10].

The tourism destination lifecycle theory introduced by [11] is a hypothetical concept for understanding the evolution or development of a tourism destination. The development of evolution is measured by two things, namely the number of tourists visiting an object and the time span of the destination’s evolutionary journey.

A tourist destination area is a geographical location located in one or more administrative regions as intended in Law of the Republic of Indonesia Number 10 of 2009 concerning Tourism which contains information about tourist attractions, public facilities, tourism facilities, accessibility, and people who visit. Interact with each other. Related to and increasing the success of tourism implementation [12]. All items that can attract tourists, including the environment, historical buildings, art and contemporary recreational facilities, are called tourist attractions [13]. According to Mill (2000), indicators of tourist destination development include:

- Availability of interesting natural and cultural tourist attractions
- Good accessibility to destinations
- Availability of tourism supporting facilities and infrastructure
- Effective promotion of tourist destinations
- The quality of the tourist experience at the destination

2.2 Cultural Tourism

Cultural tourism theory involves various views from experts, but some general concepts include the understanding that tourism can be a means of understanding, respecting, and experiencing the cultural heritage of an area [14]. The importance of interactions between tourists and local communities in preserving culture. There is also an economic approach that emphasizes the contribution of tourism to the cultural and economic development of a destination [15].

Cultural tourism is tourism whose main attraction is the cultural element. Attractions in tourism can be in the form of performing arts, museum buildings or other similar attractions [16]. The UNESCO agreement states that there are various intangible cultures that can be developed into tourism offerings, including art performances, languages, local knowledge, rituals, social activities, festivals and handicrafts. Cultural tourism has several positive impacts, including Conservation and Adaptive Re-use, Economic Benefit, and Provision of leisure and recreation facilities [17].

Several forms of cultural tourism are historical, religious and educational tourism. There are 12 cultural elements that have the potential to be attractive to tourists, including community traditions, language, handicrafts, music and art, food and eating habits, history, local people’s dress code, work methods and technology, architectural forms and characteristics of buildings, religion, education system, and activities to fill free time [18].

The impact that tourism has on culture cannot be separated from the interaction patterns between them which tend to be dynamic and positive. This dynamic is developing, because culture plays an important role in the sustainable development of tourism and vice versa, tourism plays a role in revitalizing culture. The positive characteristics of this dynamic are shown by cultural patterns being able to increase tourism and tourism also being able to advance culture [19].

Tourism development has both positive and negative impacts on the regions and communities where tourism activities are carried out. In general, tourism has a positive impact on the economy, namely increasing people’s income in tourist destination areas, opening up employment opportunities, and improving infrastructure and public facilities in tourist destination areas [20]. However, tourism can also have negative impacts, such as socio-cultural degradation of society.

a. Social Aspects

Cultural tourism can foster mutual understanding between people and culture (cross cultural understanding) due to interactions between tourists and local communities. However, he also sees the potential for cultural cruelty if cultural uniformity occurs. With cultural tourism, traditions and the ritual ceremonies of a local community that were previously faded can be revived and preserved again.

b. Economic Aspects

According to Shirley (1983), the development of cultural tourism helps create employment opportunities and stimulate the development of local creative and craft industries. Along with the flood of foreign tourists who are interested in cultural tourism objects, commercialization of local arts and culture for tourists can be done Increasing the economic value of the cultural heritage.

c. Cultural Aspects

Cultural tourism can trigger the revitalization of traditions and rituals, so that culture does not become extinct among local communities. Tourism affects cultural authenticity, as it is the local culture that has to conform to the exotic image expected by foreign tourists. Foreign tourist visits have an impact on the flow of new information and values into local traditional communities.

3. METHODS

The data analysis method used is descriptive qualitative which is useful for developing theories that have been built from data that has been obtained in the field. In the initial stage of the qualitative research method, the researcher carried out exploration, then carried out in-depth data collection, starting from observation to preparing reports [21].

The data processing techniques are as follows; 1) after the data is obtained and collected by literature studies, observations and direct interviews with stadium managers, the data is compiled for the purpose of exploring information related to social, economic and cultural aspects in Cultural Tourism at the Gelora Bung Karno Main Stadium, 2) the data has been edited and then sorted analyzed according to the research objectives, and 3) the data is presented and then interpreted the data to obtain conclusions. The data analysis used in this analysis is descriptive qualitative.

4. RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Based on this study, the impact of cultural tourism at the Gelora Bung Karno Main Stadium (SUGBK) has been analyzed. The results show that culturally, the presence of various traditional arts performances held at the stadium helps preserve ancestral heritage and makes a positive contribution to the local community. Economically, tourism activities create business opportunities such as street vendors and souvenir sellers around the stadium. Socially, the existence of cultural agendas such as art festivals and music concerts at stadiums becomes a means of cross-cultural interaction and enriches people’s insight. This impact is in line with the theory that cultural tourism has the potential to increase cross-cultural understanding, create economic opportunities and preserve Indonesia’s cultural heritage.

This study also suggests cultural tourism development strategies, such as collaborating with local arts and culture communities to maximize positive social impacts, enriching museum collections to increase awareness of cultural heritage preservation, and organizing exhibitions to attract diverse communities.

5. CONCLUSION

Based on the results of research on cultural tourism at the Gelora Bung Karno Main Stadium, it can be concluded that cultural tourism at the stadium has a positive impact on the social, economic and cultural aspects of the surrounding community, such as increasing awareness of cultural heritage preservation, community empowerment through training and mentoring for MSMEs, as well as increased tourist interest. However, developing cultural tourism requires careful planning and collaboration with the local arts and culture community. Qualitative research methods are used to gain an in-depth understanding of the potential and challenges of development. In this development, it is important to pay attention to the diversity of ethnic groups in Indonesia by holding traditional fashion exhibitions that can attract people and enrich the cultural tourism experience. Efforts are also needed to enrich museum collections and educational programs to increase awareness of cultural heritage preservation, accompanied by effective promotion. Thus, the development of cultural tourism in the SUGBK area has the potential to make a positive contribution to society and preserve Indonesia’s cultural heritage.

Based on the research results, it is recommended to increase collaboration with local arts and culture communities to maximize the positive social impact of the cultural agenda at SUGBK, such as tourism CSR programs in the form of training and mentoring for MSMEs as well as providing cultural educational tours for students. Apart from that, it is necessary to enrich the GBK Museum collection and organize interesting educational programs to increase awareness of cultural heritage preservation, accompanied by effective promotions to increase tourist interest. It is also recommended to hold traditional fashion exhibitions from various tribes to attract public attention. For future researchers, it is recommended to use quantitative survey methods to determine visitor preferences, quantitatively examine economic impacts, and examine the challenges of tourism and creative economy development in SUGBK from the manager’s perspective. Thus, it is hoped that this research can become a reference for developing cultural tourism in SUGBK which is beneficial for the community and preserving Indonesian culture.
